About Leonie Harding: Founder of Learning Behaviour

Leonie has been a classroom teacher for nearly twenty years, working in Primary, F-12, Secondary, University, Adult Education and Special Education environments. She has specialised in focusing on complex and challenging behaviours, developing support plans and wellbeing processes for a range of behavioural and learning challenges. Leonie supports this practice with two Masters of Education—the first a research thesis focusing on teacher education, the second in Applied Behaviour Analysis.

Leonie focuses her work on rural and/or disadvantaged students (and the teachers of these students), particularly those in Secondary schooling.
